

FEBRUARY 2018

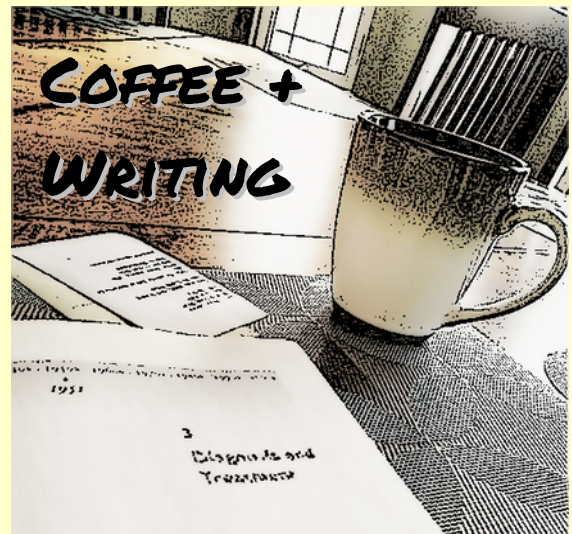

Welcome to the first monthly newsletter for the Alaska Writing Project! This is how we'll notify you of upcoming events and keep you up-to-date with the latest educational and writing resources, courtesy of our parent organization, the National Writing Project.

Incorporating Multigenre Writing in the Social Studies Classroom

Noting the gap between the level of sophistication of her students' writing in writing workshop and in social studies, teacher Kari Scheidel reflected upon her teaching practice asking "How do I use writing effectively in social studies?" In this article she shares how she developed inspiring ideas for having students practice multi-genre writing to learn in social studies. She also shares samples of student writing and suggests how students' individual and collaboratively authored pieces inspire their creative engagement at the same time that they build their subject area knowledge. Read more at bit.ly/2E1n0bE

THE HOWL

Date: February 10th

Time: 10 a.m. to noon

Location: Kaladi Bros. Coffee
621 W. 6th Ave. (Anchorage)

Theme: Love

It's past Martin Luther King, Jr. Day, but his words are of course relevant year-round:

"Love is the only force capable of transforming an enemy into a friend."

With Valentine's Day coming up, we thought it would be a good idea for writers to examine the various kinds of love, in fiction, memoir, poetry, drama...whatever your heart desires!

Follow us!

www.alaskawritingproject.org

@AlaskaWritingProject

@Alaska_WP

@alaskawritingproject

